sation at New Brunswick autopsy (328-330).

Two or three bullets turned over to Totten (331).

Other exhibits turned over, including eye glasses, neck tie clasp, turn-down collar, white shirt, cuff buttons, Masonic card, business and personal letters, the identified love letters, calling cards and the bill-fold (331-2).

Fitzpatrick made no finger prints (332).

David knew of no finger prints taken for Mott and did not see how any could have been taken. Had nothing to do with Schwartz (332-3).

Mott took hold in November. Knew nothing of card at Dr. Hall's foot (333).

Did not find any bloody burlap bag or have any information about it (334).

Woman's bloody handkerchief bearing initial "L" brought in by reporter and turned over to Beekman (334-5).

Stryker and David helped Beekman because he asked for help (335).

GROSS-EXAMINATION:

Fitzpatrick examined articles found about the bodies under glass and found no impressions clear enough to take (336).

Never heard or understood reason why Mrs. Hall sent garments to A. F. Bornot & Company (336).
